EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITIES

Research Scientist, Center for Economic and Social Research, University of Southern California. The Center for Economic and Social Research (CESR) of the University of Southern California is now accepting applications for the position of Research Scientist in the field of Sociology/Demography. The position requires excellent analytical skills, strong written and oral communication skills, significant knowledge of a specialized area of research, experience working on externally funded grants, a willingness to attract external funding, the ability to lead projects and proposals and work as a member of a multi-disciplinary team, and a commitment to effecting change through empirical research. PhD in Sociology, Demography, Public Health, or related field. Open until filled.

Assistant Professor Sociology of Environment and Technology, Utah State University. The Department of Sociology, Social Work & Anthropology at Utah State University invites applications for a tenure-track position in Sociology at the rank of Assistant Professor. The appointment would begin in either August 2016 or January 2017, depending on the availability of the successful candidate. We seek a candidate whose research and teaching interests are focused on themes involving the social dynamics of environment, science and/or technology. We seek candidates with strong theoretical and empirical skills whose research agenda addresses such issues in ways that will complement current faculty expertise in our Environmental & Community graduate specialization area, and who can also contribute to at least one of our other areas of specialization (Labor Markets & Social Policy and Demography). Deadline; February 1, 2016.

Research Scientist, MPC. The Minnesota Population Center (MPC) seeks one or more research scientists to join the diverse team of researchers and technical staff supporting and improving the world’s best dissemination systems for population and health data. The Research Scientist(s) will be involved in all stages of data and metadata production, including the web dissemination system and research dissemination. The range of work includes harmonizing codes across datasets, resolving comparability issues, coding and documenting complex variables, exploring data quality, testing website functionality, adapting existing methods and tools to new purposes, and developing new approaches to address novel situations. Required: Ph.D. (by time of appointment) in a population-related field (e.g. economics, geography, history, public health or sociology) and at least one year of research experience. Deadline: February 1, 2016.
