FUNDING OPPORTUNITIES

EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITIES

Senior Demographer, Urban Institute. The Urban Institute is seeking experienced social science researchers with expertise in demography. Areas of particular interest include family demography; urban demography; population health and aging; the demography of poverty and inequality; migration; and immigration. This position is in the Urban Institute’s Center on Labor, Human Services, and Population, a multi-disciplinary center that seeks to understand the factors shaping the well-being of families and individuals through high quality, policy relevant research on population change, the family, labor markets, and the public policies and social services that affect vulnerable populations. Researchers in LHP analyze employment and income data, study how the U.S. population is growing and changing, and evaluate programs and policies dealing with access to social services and benefits, work-family issues, child welfare, adolescent risk behavior, job training, and immigration. Position is open until filled.

Director of the Kellogg Institute for International Studies, The University of Notre Dame. The Director should have a record of scholarly excellence in one or more areas related to the Institute's agenda. Candidates need to be able to encourage collaboration among faculty from many fields and to build support for diverse teaching and research programs. Candidates must have a record of scholarly achievement that warrants appointment as a tenured full professor in an academic department at Notre Dame. Applications will be accepted until the position is filled.

Dean, Woodrow Wilson School of Public and International Affairs, Princeton University. Princeton University seeks a new Dean of the Woodrow Wilson School of Public and International Affairs, a full-time appointment. The Woodrow Wilson School offers graduate degree programs leading to the Master of Public Affairs, Master of Public Policy, and Ph.D. degrees, as well as an undergraduate concentration. Candidates must have a distinguished record of scholarly achievement; a commitment to the education of both undergraduate and graduate students; the ability to understand and encourage the full range of disciplines represented in the Woodrow Wilson School; a commitment to applying scholarly research to public policy issues; an aptitude for communicating the importance of policy-relevant scholarship to students, faculty, alumni, policy makers, and the public; and preferably experience administering a large staff. Applications will be accepted until the position is filled.

Director, Gender, Population and Development, ICRW. ICRW is seeking a full-time director to lead projects on population, development and women’s empowerment. The ideal candidate will have subject-matter expertise and professional experience in population and reproductive health issues, and in women’s empowerment, especially on issues such as adolescents and transitions to adulthood, child marriage, sex selection, fertility trends, maternal health, and reproductive behavior. The position is based in ICRW’s headquarters in Washington, DC. Application deadline: April 23, 2012.

Postdoctoral Associate, SOFI, Stockholm University. The two-year post-doc position in social stratification involves research in the social science project “Social Stratification Dynamics- Inter- and intragenerational processes.” The postdoctoral researcher is expected to carry out independent research, collaborate with other project members, contribute to the development of register-based research within the area of social stratification, and to take part in other activities within the project. Research topics within the program include mobility to, from, and between extreme positions (labor market elite and poverty), income mobility, class and mortality, as well as processes of occupational and educational attainment. Application deadline: April 30, 2012.

Census Bureau Recruitment at the Population Association of America Annual Meetings. The U.S. Census Bureau has full-time opportunities in the domestic and international programs for qualified U.S. citizens in the areas of geography, demography, sociology, economics, and related social sciences. We are looking for candidates at all levels of education (BA, MA, PhD). Training in demographic analysis, survey research, geographic information systems, and/or quantitative data analysis of large datasets is preferred. These openings offer applicants the opportunity to work on one or more of the following topics: population distribution; population estimates and projections; housing; income; disability; health insurance coverage; education; and migration. Representatives will be recruiting during the Population Association of America (PAA) annual meeting in San Francisco, CA. We will conduct 30 minute informational recruiting sessions during the conference (May 3, 4). Please email David Zaslow to sign up prior to the conference or visit the Census Bureau’s exhibition booth during the meeting. A short presentation about working at the Census Bureau will be held Friday afternoon from 1:00-3:00pm.

Assistant Professor, Department of Global Health, School of Public Health, University of Washington. The successful applicant will have a PhD in statistics, economics, computer science, mathematics or related field. The successful applicant will have demonstrated experience undertaking impact evaluations and developing innovative analytic techniques to assess the impact of global health policies and programs. Extensive research experience using innovative and diverse applications applied to various global health topics preferred. Application deadline: May 9, 2012.
Assistant Specialist in Social Demography at Univ. of Hawai`i at Manoa. The Center on the Family, University of Hawai`i at Manoa is seeking for applications for an Assistant Specialist in Social Demography. Specialist will design and conduct integrated research and outreach activities in areas relating to the well-being of families in Hawai`i. Examples of relevant content areas include, but are not limited to: small area population estimation, family and household, race and ethnicity, and population health. Doctoral degree in a social science, public health, or a related field, with a specialization in demography is required. Application deadline: May 31, 2012.
