EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITIES

International Health Researcher, Mathematica. Mathematica seeks researchers committed to contributing to the evidence base of what works to improve a range of health-related outcomes in developing country contexts. We are especially looking for researchers with experience implementing program evaluations in Africa, Asia, and/or Latin America who want to be part of our rapidly growing team of international evaluation researchers and who are passionate about helping to identify programs that result in better development outcomes. The ideal candidate will have expertise in quantitative and qualitative evaluation methods; knowledge of reproductive, maternal and child health issues and programs in developing countries; interest in working with clients on measurement, evaluation, and learning activities; and experience executing evaluations in complex and changing environments. PhD or equivalent in public health, economics, or a related social science. Open until filled.

International Survey Methodologist, Pew Research Center. The International Survey Methodologist works closely with the Director of Global Attitudes Research and the Associate Director, Research in designing and executing the Pew Research Center’s international research agenda. The methodologist advises on survey design, sampling plans, weighting and analytic strategies. The methodologist position requires substantial knowledge and skill in survey methodology – including various sampling frames, data collection modes and questionnaire design – as well as extensive background in statistics and statistical analysis. PhD in survey methodology, statistics or quantitative social science field is required. Open until filled.

Survey Research Methodologist, Pew Research Center. The Survey Research Methodologist will work with researchers across Pew Research Center, while also serving as the Center’s primary liaison to The Pew Charitable Trusts on matters of polling and survey research. This individual will play a role in the development of survey projects on a wide variety of topics, and advise on best research practices at both Pew Research Center and The Pew Charitable Trusts. This position will operate as a member of the Pew Research Center’s Methodology team and will report to the Director of Survey Research. This position requires substantial knowledge and skill in survey methodology as well as significant project management skills. Open until filled.

Senior Sociologist-Labor and Population, RAND Corporation. RAND’s Labor and Population Division is seeking senior-level researchers to conduct high-quality, cutting-edge social demographic research as part of the RAND Population Research Center (PRC). Currently, the PRC’s research agenda is characterized by a focus on children and families, labor market and human capital investments, and socioeconomic disparities in health. RAND's Labor and Population Division is looking to both grow in these areas and to expand into other domains of demographic research, including migration/immigration. PhD in sociology, demography, or a related field is a prerequisite for all candidates. Open until filled.
