Research on the Role of Epigenetics in Social, Behavioral, Environmental and Biological Relationships, throughout the Life-Span and across Generations (R21). OppNet initiatives invite investigators to propose innovative research that will advance basic social and behavioral sciences and produce knowledge and/or tools of potential relevance to multiple domains of health- and life course-related research. Application deadline: November 13, 2013.

NICHD/NIH, Population Dynamics Branch (PDB). The PDB (formerly the Demographic and Behavioral Sciences Branch) supports research and research training in demography, reproductive health, and population health. Ongoing FOAs.

NIA/NIH, Division of Behavioral and Social Research (BSR). The Division of Behavioral and Social Research (BSR) supports social, behavioral, and economic research and research training on the processes of aging at both the individual and societal level. Ongoing FOAs.

EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITIES

Open Rank Professor of Population Studies/Demography, University of Minnesota. The University of Minnesota invites applications for two or three open-rank, full-time, tenure-track or tenured faculty positions. We seek demographers or population researchers who can actively contribute to the research and training missions of the University, the Minnesota Population Center (MPC), and its affiliated colleges and academic units. We seek demographers with established or emerging lines of high-quality population research. That research may be on any number of substantive areas within demography including (but not limited to) fertility, mortality, migration, historical demography, labor force dynamics, household and family dynamics, education and human capital, population and the environment, neighborhoods and urbanization, aging, and population approaches to health disparities and health policy. Open until filled.

Research Fellow, Minnesota Population Center. The Minnesota Population Center (MPC) is seeking one or more research fellows to investigate data issues and participate as a member of the IPUMS/USA research teams. A master’s degree or A.B.D. (completed preliminary exams) in a health, social science, or public policy-related field. Excellent written and verbal communication skills. Excellent computer skills including demonstrated mastery of at least one major statistical package (Stata, SAS, or SPSS). Research experience using one of the IPUMS databases or any other large-scale census or survey data. Open until filled.

Assistant Professor of Sociology, Winthrop University. The Winthrop University Sociology and Anthropology Department invites applications for a tenure track assistant professor position beginning August 2014; the successful candidate will teach a variety of courses in sociology including undergraduate statistics and research methods, other courses within specialization and possibly within the University’s interdisciplinary general education program. A global/international focus (demography/urban) is a plus. Open until filled.

Research and Policy Analyst, Demographics & Workforce Group, University of Virginia. The Demographics & Workforce Group of the University of Virginia’s Weldon Cooper Center for Public Service wish to expand our public service capabilities by attracting top quality professionals interested in demographic research and its application to public discourse and policy. The position (#0612864) requires a graduate degree in demography, sociology, economics, geography, statistics, public policy, or related fields. Proficiency in SAS, STATA or R is required. Open until filled.
Postdoctoral Research Fellows, Max Planck Institute for Demographic Research. MPIDR is looking for Postdoctoral Research Fellows to work in a research group directed by Prof. Dr. Frans Willekens. The new group has started on 1 April 2013 for an expected duration of three years and its work will focus on agent-based modeling (ABM) of international migration. The objective is to develop simulation models of causal mechanisms driving international migration. Open until filled.

Post-doctoral Fellowship in Human Capital Interventions in Development Academic Years, UC Irvine. The School of Education at the University of California, Irvine is hiring a postdoctoral fellow for two years beginning with the 2014-15 academic year. The fellowship includes a salary of $50,000 per year, plus health insurance, and funding for conference travel, professional development, and a computer fund. Postdoctoral fellows will join an interdisciplinary research team housed in the School of Education and led by faculty with appointments in the UCI School of Education and Department of Economics and Vanderbilt’s Department of Economics. The heart of the research opportunities provided to fellows is a five-year NICHD-funded program project (P01) that was awarded to the University of California, Irvine (PI: Duncan). The program project’s principal goal is to understand why human capital intervention programs and policies, directed at children in the preschool, middle childhood and adolescent stages of development, have the effects, non-effects and, in some cases, perverse effects that they do. Submission deadline: October 23, 2013.

Open Rank Professor of Sociology, American University. The Department of Sociology at American University (Washington, D.C.), College of Arts and Sciences, invites applications for a tenure line appointment beginning in August 2014. In conjunction with the development of a departmental focus in health and the newly established Center on Health, Risk and Society, the department seeks candidates with a primary area of specialization in the social dimensions of health and well-being. Areas of specialization to complement teaching and research on health, as well as the strengths of the department include: globalization, migration, inequalities, sexuality, and/or urban communities. While all areas of health will be considered, particular health foci in the department and at the Center include HIV/AIDS, food/obesity, environment, maternal and child health, and substance use/abuse. Submission deadline: October 23, 2013.

Assistant Professor of Sociology, Sonoma State University. The Department of Sociology at Sonoma State University is hiring a tenure-track, full-time, Assistant Professor (Job #103649) starting mid-August 2014. The successful candidate must have the ability to teach undergraduate research methods and statistics, as well as expertise in one or more of the following areas: (1) demography/population; (2) medical sociology; (3) sociology of education. To be recommended for appointment, the candidate must have a Ph.D. in sociology. Submission deadline: October 25, 2013.

Assistant Professor of Sociology, Loyola University Chicago. Tenure-track assistant professor Loyola University Chicago’s Department of Sociology seeks to fill an Assistant Professor tenure-track position beginning in Fall 2014. We are especially interested in hiring a candidate whose primary expertise is in medical sociology/health care, with interests in gender, race, and inequalities. Other relevant scholarly interests can include immigration, the natural and built environments, religion, or urban sociology. Submission deadline: October 28, 2013.

Open Rank Professor of Sociology, Texas A&M University. The Department of Sociology at Texas A&M University invites applications for an open rank position in the broadly defined area of Political and Economic Sociology. Candidates are encouraged to apply in all research areas relevant to Political and Economic Sociology including class, development, economic, environmental, work, labor, and political, but we have particular needs in complex organizations and social movements. Candidates with research expertise that complements one of our other five specialty areas (Crime, Law, and Deviance; Culture; Demography; Race and Ethnicity; and Social Psychology) are encouraged to apply. Submission deadline: October 30, 2013.
Lecturer/Senior Lecturer, Australian Demographic and Social Research Institute, ANU College of Arts and Social Sciences. The Australian Demographic and Social Research Institute at the Australian National University invites applications for a continuing academic position. The Institute has the largest concentration of demographers in Australia actively engaged in a broad range of demographic research areas, including fertility, family, ageing, mortality and migration, as well as the interdisciplinary research areas of social networks, gender, modeling, forecasting and the environment. Submission deadline: October 31, 2013.

Assistant Professor of Sociology & Anthropology, Earlham College. Earlham College invites applications for a tenure-track position as Assistant Professor of Sociology beginning Fall 2014. We seek candidates who are broadly trained in sociology to serve in the core sociology position of a joint Sociology/Anthropology program. The successful candidate must have a specialization in race and ethnicity in the United States and be prepared to contribute crosslisted courses to our African and African-American Studies Program. Submission deadline: November 1, 2013.

Assistant Professor of Sociology, University of Southern California. The Department of Sociology in the Dana and David Dornsife College of Letters, Arts and Sciences at the University of Southern California (Los Angeles, CA) invites applications for a tenure-track Assistant Professor position in Quantitative Social Demography, with an anticipated start date of Fall 2014. We seek applicants who are trained in quantitative methods and do empirically grounded, theoretically innovative research. Submission deadline: November 1, 2013.

Tenure-track faculty position, Economic Disparities, UC Berkeley. The University of California, Berkeley invites applications for a faculty position (tenure-track) related to Economic Disparities, with a start date of July 1, 2014. We are especially interested in scholars who investigate economic disparities, with a focus on spatial dimensions of economic disparities, geographies of inequity, African American communities or the African diaspora, or other underrepresented minority communities, either domestically or internationally. The successful candidate will have a program of research that bears on pressing social problems, including but not limited to the urban landscape, health disparities, labor markets, inequality, housing markets, immigration, global labor flows, gendering and marginality, or environmental inequities. The successful candidate will have a PhD in a relevant discipline, such as geography, African American studies, economics, public policy, political science, demography, sociology, anthropology, or planning. Submission deadline: November 1, 2013.

Assistant Professor in Global Health and Environment, Indiana University. The Department of International Studies in the School of Global and International Studies, College of Arts and Sciences, Indiana University, invites applications for a tenure-track position at the Assistant Professor level in global health and/or human-environment interactions; to begin August 2014. All qualified candidates are encouraged to apply, particularly those with quantitative expertise, demonstrated methodological training, and a commitment to working on international issues. We are seeking faculty who have an interdisciplinary background with expertise in issues relevant to global health (from epidemiology to practices and policies, population issues, infectious or chronic diseases, health disparities, etc.) and/or human-environment interactions (e.g., environmental health, natural resource management, climate change, ecosystem services and vulnerabilities, etc.). Submission deadline: November 1, 2013.

Tenure Track Associate Professor/Professor in Department of Population, Family and Reproductive and Health, Johns Hopkins Bloomberg School of Public Health. The Department of Population, Family and Reproductive Health, PFRH, seeks a demographer to fill a tenure track position of Associate Professor or Professor. The successful applicant will have an established reputation in demography, a history of: academic service, innovative research, a demonstrated excellence in teaching and advising, and solid funding support. A strong record of publications in peer-reviewed journals is a requisite. Applicants should have published in one or more of the following demography areas: family, urban, poverty, geriatric, fertility, sexual behavior, migration, mortality, demographic methods, reproductive health, and biodemography. Applicants should also have proven collaborative skills. A history of interdisciplinary research related to public health is especially attractive.

Submission deadline: November 1, 2013.

Assistant Professor, The Sanford School, Arizona State University. The T. Denny Sanford School of Social and Family Dynamics, a named interdisciplinary unit at Arizona State University, invites applications for a full-time, tenure-track Assistant Professor position with expertise in Latino youth and/or families to begin Fall of 2014 (job # 10502). PhD or equivalent in human/family development, psychology, education, sociology or related area by time of appointment; a strong record of success in research, including having secured external funding and having an accomplished record of publications relevant to advancing scholarship on Latino youth/families; demonstrated excellence in teaching and mentoring students at the undergraduate and graduate levels; and have a strong commitment to leading research initiatives focused on Latino youth/families. Submission deadline: November 1, 2013.

(1-2) Postdoctoral Researchers, Department of Sociology, Stockholm University. The Department of Sociology at Stockholm University seeks to employ one or two post doc researcher(s) (ref #SU FV-2404-13) for the project Social Networks, Attitudes, and Political Behavior. The project is focused on analyzing a unique dataset, combining survey data and register data, to study social network and contextual effects (neighborhoods and schools) on individual political attitudes and behavior. We are studying e.g., xenophobia, gender equality, moral economy, trust, social cohesion, party preferences, and political engagement. Submission deadline: November 1, 2013.

Full Professor of Sociology, Duke University. The Department of Sociology seeks applications to fill a position at the tenured full professor level. Candidates should have research and teaching experience and a publication record in demography, health, and aging commensurate with an appointment at this level. Interest and experience in advanced quantitative methods is also desirable. Submission deadline: November 1, 2013.

(2) Tenure-track Instructor I of Sociology, University of British Columbia. The University of British Columbia (Vancouver) invites applications for two full-time, tenure-track Instructor I positions in the Department of Sociology. The ideal candidate would be a broadly trained sociologist capable of high quality teaching at both the introductory and senior undergraduate levels. For one of the positions a specialization in sociology of the family would be desirable; for the second position the specialization is open. Submission deadline: November 1, 2013.

(2) Three-year Postdoctoral Prize Research Fellowships in Sociology, Nuffield College, University of Oxford. Nuffield College intends to appoint, with effect from 1 September 2014, two Postdoctoral Prize Research Fellows (PPRFs) in Sociology. Applications are invited from graduates wishing to undertake research in any area of Sociology. The main interests of the College are in Economics, Politics and Sociology, but these are broadly construed to include, for example, social science approaches to history, social and medical statistics, international relations, social psychology, public policy, and social policy. Submission deadline: November 4, 2013.

Assistant or Associate Professor of Latino Health Disparities, University of South Carolina. The University of South Carolina’s Arnold School of Public Health invites applications for a tenure-track faculty position for scholars interested in Latino Health Disparities. The position will be in the Department of Health Promotion, Education, and Behavior at the Assistant or Associate Professor level, and a possible joint appointment with Women’s and Gender Studies. This position was created under the University’s innovative Faculty Excellence Initiative as part of a cluster of scholars who collaborate with one another and with the current faculty to participate in interdisciplinary research, teaching, and community engagement on topics of Latino immigration and the health and well-being of immigrant and host-nation families, and communities. Submission deadline: November 12, 2013.
Assistant Professor of American Social History, California Institute of Technology (Caltech). The Division of the Humanities and Social Sciences at the California Institute of Technology (Caltech) invites applications for a tenure-track position at the assistant professor level, beginning fall 2014. Appropriate specialties include social science history, race relations, women, demography, or politics, in any period of American History. We are seeking highly qualified candidates who are committed to a career in research and teaching. Submission deadline: November 15, 2013.

Open Rank Professor in Latin American Health, UCLA. The Department of Community Health Sciences, UCLA School of Public Health, seeks to fill a tenured or tenure-track faculty position in Latin American health. Scholarly emphasis of the applicant should be on evidence-based practice, policies, and programs that impact community and population health. Our multidisciplinary faculty has a strong history of ongoing research and graduate education (MPH, MSPH, DrPH, PhD programs), and conducts research programs in both domestic and global contexts. Submission deadline: November 15, 2013.

Assistant Professor of Sociology, San Diego State University. The San Diego State University Department of Sociology is seeking applications for a tenure-track position at the rank of Assistant Professor in Gender/Sexuality/Qualitative Methods to begin the fall semester of 2014. A Ph.D. in Sociology is required, as is evidence of research. The successful candidate will teach both undergraduate and graduate courses in the areas of gender, sexuality, sexual identity and qualitative methods. Submission deadline: November 18, 2013.

Assistant Professor of Public Policy, Harvard Kennedy School. The Harvard Kennedy School invites applications for the position of Assistant Professor beginning in the Fall 2014 semester. We are interested in candidates in all fields of economics and related disciplines, but are particularly interested in candidates with strong analytical or empirical skills in applied microeconomics including industrial organization, public finance, labor, education, health, housing, environmental economics, development, econometrics and applied theory, as well as in trade and macroeconomics.
